

As companies roll out 5G, it will not immediately be available everywhere. Big cities will see it first, if they haven't already, and rural areas may have to wait several years for full coverage. New technologies also will likely experience hiccups, which could further limit the coverage.